Beauregard on the War.

It has just come to be be that in 1866 the newly inducted Charles of II deep diero, Datenitor Prince of Romannia, realered to Gen. P. G. Benuregard, then have a in Paris, the conmand of his armi -, with the rick of field movshal, a c muiete outlie, and $100,000 a year pay. Gon Beauregar i was to be at fiberie i. select his own staff and certain other effice. and to designate their rank. It was points that the army should be kept at a minimum of 100,000 men. The General however, declined the offer and returned to New Orleans, where he now is. He has written a letter, under date of May 10th, in which he refers to this offer. and expresses his warm sympathy with the Turks, "because they are the weaker party and are defending their homes and firesides." As to the pretext of war—"the protection of the Christians"—he says: "It reminds me of the complaint of the wolf drinking at the same spring with the lamb." General Beauregard adds: "Turkey offers magnificent fines of defence—the Danube and the Balkin mountains. With two or three hundred thousand Confederate troops I would guarantee to hold them against any number of Russians. If I were in command there I would fortify these lines well, and with my iron-clad gunboats I would prevent the construction of any bridges across the Danube. I would send Gen. Forrest with twentyfive thousand cavalry to destroy all the depots of supplies, railroad and bridges from the D. nube to middle Russia, thence to some port of the Black Sea, where I would transport his command to some other layorable point, say in the rear of the Russian forces operating to Asia, south of the Black Sea. Ferrest would be provided with came's to transport his light field artiflery, baggage and light pontoon trains He would have also a full supply of carrier pigeons to keep me posted as to his mov-ments. My flact in the Black Sea would keep it free of the enemy's ships. I would destroy

The Flag of the Prophet. The sacred emblem of Turkish faith will play a great role in this war. It is dark green, about two yards long and one and a half wide, and was originally a curtain to the bedchamber of Aischa, the best beloved wife of the prophet. who died in her bed. When Mohammed was on his deathbed and about to take leave of his Generals, who were about to enter upon a new campaign against the heather, the dying 1970 phet gave them the curtain that overhung his and as a battle flig, so that the faithful should time, remember that they were doing battle they took this prophet. In 1683 my this holy relie in from the walls of Vienna, uf religion was ever the cause of Islam had today waved ed it was unfurled to rally the Whenand encourage them to deeds of herois. What, however, is the most important feature of this flag is the belief that any Mussulman who fights and facts under its shadows dies as a martyr, for whom the portals of heaven are opened at once. From the Caliphs of old this banner has been sacredly retained by the Sultans of our day, in order to inspire still more zeal in their soldiers. Yesterday the unfolding of this time-honored banner took piace with great potop and ceremony by the Sultan, Ab dul Hamid, in person, who handed it to the Scheik Et-Islam in solemn trust. The latter was mounted on a horse literally covered with ISAAC EICHBERG'S. gold, and, while holding the sacred banner in his hand, he was necompassed by the Sultan, himself also on horseback, with sword in hand, through the principal streets of Constantinople Couriers and heralds proceeded the two high dig nitaries of State, and, pointing to the unfurled banner, loudly procesiming to the people that the war for the faith had commenced.
